Intersection Safety

Intersections are cause for special consideration. Nearly one-half of all collisions occur at intersections. Why are intersections dangerous? Any street that empties into an intersection holds a potential accident. So statistically, in a four way intersection, you could face four different accidents from four different directions. And that does not even include potential pedestrian accidents! As a professional Bus Operator, you'll go through hundreds of intersections each day. There are five (5) "rules to live by" that you should always apply to every intersection.

Five Intersection Rules to Live by:

- Always expect trouble.
- Always cover your brake when approaching an intersection.
- Always keep your head and eyes moving.
- Always let the intersection clear before you enter it.
- Always expect distracted people.
